A countermotion and its grounds do not have to be published

1. If publication would render the executive board liable to prosecution
2. If the countermotion would lead to a resolution by the annual general meeting that infringes the law or the articles of association
3. If material points of the grounds contain obviously false or misleading information or insulting statements
4. If a countermotion by the shareholder relating to the same issue has already been published in the context of an annual general meeting of the company pursuant to § 125
5. If the same countermotion by the shareholder involving essentially the same grounds has been published pursuant to § 125 in the context of at least two of the company's annual general meetings in the last five years and less than one twentieth of the share capital represented voted in favor of such counter-motion

6. If the shareholder reveals that neither she/he nor a proxy will be present at the annual general meeting, or
7. If the shareholder did not file, or did not have filed, a counter-motion communicated by that shareholder at two annual general meetings over the last two years.

The same applies mutatis mutandis to the publication of nominations. Furthermore, the executive board need not publish nominations for the election of supervisory board members or auditors if such nominations do not include the name, exercised profession and place of residence of the nominees or, in the case of legal entities, the name of the firm and the location of its registered offices, and in the case of nominations to the supervisory board, such nominations do not contain details of their membership in other statutory supervisory boards. Details of their membership in comparable domestic and foreign supervisory bodies of commercial enterprises should be included.

The grounds of counter-motions and nominations do not have to be published if they exceed a total of 5,000 characters. If more than one shareholder files a counter-motion relating to the same resolution or makes the same nominations, the executive board may summarize the counter-motions or nominations as well as the respective grounds.

Any shareholder counter-motions and nominations requiring publication, including the name of the shareholder and any grounds that need to be disclosed, will be published upon receipt at the webpage <http://www.porsche-se.com/investorrelations/hv>. 3. Right to information pursuant to § 131 (1) German Stock Corporations Act

Each shareholder will upon request be provided with information at an annual general meeting by the executive board regarding the company's affairs, to the extent that such information is necessary to permit a proper evaluation of the relevant item on the agenda. The duty to provide information also extends to the company's legal and business relations with any affiliates. If a company makes use of the exemptions specified in § 266 (1) Sentence 2, § 276 or § 288 German Commercial Code, each shareholder may request to be shown, at the annual general meeting pertaining to those financial statements, the financial statements in the form they would have taken had these provisions not been applied. The duty to provide information incumbent upon the executive board of a parent company (§ 290 (1), (2) German Commercial Code) at the annual general meeting at which the consolidated financial statements and the group management report are presented extends to the situation of the group and the entities included in the consolidated financial statements.

The executive boards may refuse to provide information

1. If, applying prudent business judgment, providing the information is likely to cause a not inconsiderable disadvantage to the company or an affiliate
2. If it relates to the tax base or the amount of individual taxes
3. On the difference between the value at which assets are disclosed in the balance sheet and any higher value of these assets, unless the annual general meeting is scheduled to ratify the financial statements
4. On the accounting policies used if the statements on these policies contained in the notes to the financial statements are adequate to give a true and fair view of the net assets, financial position and results of operations of the company in accordance with § 264 (2) German Commercial Code; this will not apply if the annual general meeting is scheduled to ratify the financial statements
5. If provision of the information would render the executive board liable to prosecution
6. If the information is made continually available on the company's website for at least seven days prior to the annual general meeting and at the annual general meeting

The provision of information may not be refused to any other reason.

If information has been provided to a shareholder in his/her capacity as shareholder other than at an annual general meeting, such information must be made available, upon request, to every other shareholder at the annual general meeting even if such information is not necessary to permit a proper evaluation of the relevant item on the agenda. In such cases, the executive board may not refuse to provide information pursuant to Nos. 1 through 4.

If a shareholder is denied information, such shareholder may request the enquiry and the reason for which the information was denied to be included in the minutes of the meeting.
